

Dear reader!

There are two possibilities: our world works according to rules or we live in chaos.

The proof is very simple:

If rules rule the world, then every change has a reason and EVERY happening is only possible according to the rules (in one way). The past clearly defines the present.

If someone claims that a change (event) is also possible that is not subject to rules, then he is letting the chaos into his world. Such an event can be any, since there are no rules for it. If anything is possible, then anything can happen anytime, anywhere - precisely because change does not follow rules.

There is no intermediate version!

Since cannot be said to the non-rulable event what it should be, since it does not take place according to rules, it can be anything in the broadest possible sense. That's why I call it chaos. So a world of chaos or rules - there is no middle ground.

In a world dependent on rules, everything and everyone has a destiny. It is not worth writing about a world that not depend on rules, because in such a world anything can happen anywhere, at any time, since there are no rules for irregular events.

Believe it or not, the consciousness of destiny is the hope of those who suffer.

If you are satisfied with your life and are not interested in new philosophical knowledge, then my writing is not useful for you.

However, if you are not completely satisfied with your life or are open to new knowledge, then my writing may be useful for you.

The primary goal of my writing is to help those who are searching for the meaning of the world and people suffering from spiritual wounds. It can be simple dissatisfaction, hatred, anger, fear, or anything similar.

My secondary goal is to show new philosophical knowledge to readers with a philosophical interest or knowledge. My presented logic shows the world in a new light.

I do not aim to publish advertising or marketing content, collect money, etc. I am driven solely by the intention to help.

My writing does not depend on religion or politics. I build on pure logic. I will present a logical system of connections and, based on this, some interesting conclusions, and then, along with some other thoughts, I will present a view of life. This view of life can be a radically new concept for you.

If you have any doubts, think back to the introductory thoughts. Have you ever wondered if the world is depend on rules? Would you have thought that if the world were not ruled by rules, then chaos would be the only alternative? Are you sure you understand the concept of fate correctly?

!!! I update my writing about every month (gofate.eu/en). Its development depends on my free time.
